Cazenovia College Magazine PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE Vol. VIII No. 1

In this Challenging Time, Your College Remains Strong

As we approach the end of another academic year, we are well aware of the economic challenges that await Cazenovia College in 2009-10. We have been fiscally prudent; at the same time we have acted to preserve the quality of the experiences we provide for our students.

his is a trying economic time in our country's history, and institutions such as Cazenovia College are not immune. The potential for lower enrollment numbers in 2009-10, coupled with reduced support from our investment portfolio, will require us to continue to be deliberate in all our budgetary decisions.

Now more than ever, tuition assistance and scholarships are vitally important. Without the continued support of generous alumni and friends, some of our students may not be able to return to Cazenovia College to complete their education. I encourage you to review the message on page 35 to find out how you can help our students to experience the value of a Cazenovia College education.

Cazenovia College's many strengths enable us to feel confident that we will successfully weather the current economic uncertainties. Attendance at the recent Admissions' open houses confirms that your College continues to be a highly desired institution of higher learning. Application numbers remain strong and at the same time, fund-raising continues at a pace that may actually match last year's very successful totals.

We will remain on a path that emphasizes quality over quantity. Some institutions are all about more, more and more. At Cazenovia, we're about better, better and better. That is where our future lies. This is evidenced in the recent improvements made to several facilities on campus - thanks to generous gifts received from alumni and friends. The former student center in Hubbard Hall was recently transformed into an improved multi-purpose function room, the Morgan Room. A new greenhouse is blooming on the roof of Eckel Hall. The Sayford Cyber Café opened in January in the J.M. McDonald Student Center. Hubbard II will soon become the Witherill Common Room, an academic commons and lounge area for everyone at the College to enjoy. This coming summer the addition of two elevators will make all of Williams, Coleman, Eddy and Hubbard halls fully accessible by the start of the fall 2009 semester.

In this challenging time, your College remains strong. On behalf of our students, Board of Trustees, and the entire Cazenovia College family, thank you for standing with us as we work together in building bright futures. By carefully managing our resources and by safeguarding our endowment holdings, we will protect the fiscal soundness of the College, as well as its future. Cazenovia College will not move backward. We have a responsibility to protect all that we have accomplished together during the past decade and to preserve the future of our great institution.

"All People Have a Right to Matter"

Sara Wall-Bollinger '74 grew naturally into commitment to people with disabilities

66 T believe in civil rights," says Sara Wall-Bollinger '74. All people have the right to matter." This has been the theme of Wall-Bollinger's life. For nearly 20 years she has been the executive director and chief executive officer of Enable, United Cerebral Palsy and Handicapped Children's Association of Syracuse. Before that, she with mental health, civil liberties, and rehabilitation.

Wall-Bollinger says, "In the 1960s, my formative years, the theme was people of color. In the 1970s, my college years, the theme was women's liberation. In the 1980s, when I was developing my career, the theme was people with disabilities." She says now, "I am committed to justice for all people."

After earning an associate's degree in liberal arts from Cazenovia College, where her mother, Sheila Wall, taught in the Child Studies Program, she completed her bachelor of arts degree in history and education from Alfred University and her master of arts degree in education and counseling at Colgate University.

She credits a graduate school internship at a psychiatric hospital with changing the course of her life. "I was a history teacher training for a career as a high school guidance counselor. I became so intrigued by working with recipients of psychiatric services that I changed course."

It was her Cazenovia College experience that built her self-confidence. she says. "I was elected to student government and, as valedictorian, spoke at my commencement ceremony. Skills such as speaking before a large group and making a case to convince others have served me well ever since."

She continues, "I also learned more about the financial realities of a college than is probably typical, because the College almost closed during my second year. I think this early 'reality check' has helped me, as a non-profit administrator, to understand that devotion to mission alone does not pay the bills."

She began her career at Transitional Living Services of Onondaga

County and then moved on to Catholic Charities of Syracuse, before taking her current position with Enable. She says, "Our mission is to enhance the quality of life for people with physical and developmental disabilities through an array of individualized services."

"Paying the bills" encompasses far more than keeping Enable solvent. Wall-Bollinger supervises more than 600 staff members who serve more than 1,600 individuals each year, with guidance from a volunteer board of directors. She says, "I am also influenced by input from people with disabilities themselves, their families, and their support staff. Enable's past has been, and future will be, primarily determined by the expressed wishes of our service participants."

Enable benefits from millions of dollars of government funding each year. "These funds," says Wall-Bollinger, "come with strings, more strings, and tangled strings. One of my roles is to insure that we continue to access appropriate government funds, comply with myriad regulations associated with the funding, and educate lawmakers regarding the impact of their decisions."

Because she is involved primarily with administration, Wall-Bollinger seldom sees first-hand the day-to-day results of her work. However, she recalls one instance when an interviewer asked for human interest photos. "With no warning or preparation, program participants who were at Enable at the time agreed to be interviewed and said nice things about their experiences."

marketing video with program participants. One participant recorded "I love it here" for the video. "A few months later," she says, "he took the time to send me a letter to thank the organization and our staff for the great progress he has made on his rehabilitation."

Instances like these may seem a small return for the responsibility Wall-Bollinger bears. A reward that is very visible to observers is the 30,000 square foot "green" addition to the Court Street facility, the first LEED-certified building in Syracuse. Wall-Bollinger speaks with pride about self-directed personal services, aquatic rehabilitation and the adaptive equipment lending library, just a few of the services instituted at Enable under her leadership.

On a personal level, Wall-Bollinger finds a great reward in her ability to see her own growth as a leader, and new possibilities both for herself and her organization. Through her early career she was focused on being a manager, but over time, that has changed.

She says, "As the organization has grown and my management style has matured, I am more focused on leadership. This has led me to think more about the future. I am inclined now to focus on what could be, more than what is. The current economic downturn is depressing, but in my own mind I have already moved beyond this period to the opportunities that will be available next year or the year after. I have never let current reality restrict my plans for the future."

When Sara Wall-Bollinger spoke at Cazenovia College's 2004 Academic Convocation, she advised students to become involved in the community, to volunteer.

"These experiences give you a chance to interact with different kinds of people both the recipients of your attention and the other volunteers."

Upgrades Modernize Several Campus Facilities

his year's winter break proved to be a very productive one as finishing touches were made to three highly anticipated projects on campus.

The dish room in the Dining Hall kitchen was completed. Now equipped with a new dishwasher that is considerably smaller, more efficient and environmentally friendly, employees are already raving about the improved working environment. "The new machine is saving energy, water, soap, and staff time," said John Lehmann, the College's director of dining, conference and catering services.

According to Tim Wells and Everett Gaut - the employees who work in the dish room on a daily basis - the new dish washer has provided for a better work flow, reduced the handling of dishes, and significantly minimized the amount of lifting and walking. "The improved handling of incoming dishware and flatware, and more efficient disposal of garbage has resulted in a happier, more productive staff that gets done earlier,"

Awaiting the students as they returned to campus for the spring 2009 semester was the new Sayford Cyber Café in the J.M. McDonald Student Center, located in Chapman Hall. Featuring Seattle's Best Coffee, lattes and teas, with upscale sandwiches, flatbread Paninis, wraps and baked goods, the café is open seven days a week from 7 p.m. until midnight.

"Not only does the café create a great place for students to gather, but the variety of food and drinks offered is refreshing," said senior Brandi Moyer. "This new offering really reaches out to a whole other cross section of students, complementing Pizza After Dark and bringing a coffeehouse feel to our student center."

Last, but not least, the Morgan Room was used for the first time on February 11, 2009. In the morning, a light breakfast was served in recognition of the College maintenance crew's work in transforming what used to be the College's student center into an improved multi-purpose room. Later in the afternoon President Tierno used the room to meet with students interested in studying abroad next year in Canterbury, England. Looking forward, the College is already booking a steady stream of banquets, meetings, classes, seminars, and other events to be held in the newest venue on campus, the Morgan Room.

Office of Communications: Moving in a New Direction

Staff members in the Office of Communications are pleased to announce their official move to 25 Sullivan Street. Located directly across the street from Joy Hall, a quaint two-story home (leased by the College) has allowed the six members of the communications staff to blend their talents all under one roof.

Previously, the staff was housed in two separate buildings: Joy Hall and the Alumni House. "Moving to this new location affords our team an opportunity to operate as a united force in a central 'communication headquarters," said Director of Communications WayneWestervelt, who added that the staff will now be in a position to expand their "team" mentality and better serve the College and its constituents in the areas of publications, promotion, branding, integrated marketing, advertising, Web communications, media relations and internal communications.

In addition to their new location, some fresh faces were welcomed into the College family in 2008. Tasha Johnson '08, graphic designer, has brought a medley of creative skills to the table since July. Web developer Sean Kelly joined the staff in October and has been instrumental in the maintenance and development of Web based projects. In December, Danielle Murray, assistant director of communications, began serving as a liaison to the community and maintaining effective communications practices for the College.

Rewarding Commitment to the Pursuit of Knowledge and Understanding

Dr. Stephanie Leeds underwrites annual honors award

Stephanie Leeds, Ph.D., retired from her teaching and directorship responsibilities in Cazenovia College's Education and Child Studies Programs in 2007. However, after shaping the lives and careers of hundreds of students during her teaching career, she finds herself unwilling to retire from being a positive influence on our students.

Leeds recently created the Stephanie F. Leeds All College Honors Program Award Fund to provide financial awards to graduating seniors in recognition of academic achievement. The Award will be given annually to a Cazenovia College graduate earning the All College Honors degree with the highest cumulative four-year GPA. Leeds says, "I am excited to offer an award recognizing a young scholar and her or his commitment to the values of rigor and excellence in the pursuit of knowledge and understanding."

"I am particularly pleased to support the Honors Program at Cazenovia College," she continues, "because it offers students in any major the opportunity to deepen their academic inquiry and meet high expectations – both of which I believe are hallmarks of a quality college education."

Dr. Grazyna Kozaczka, director of the All College Honors Program, will present the first award at the College's annual Academic Awards Banquet during commencement week. Kozaczka says, "Stephanie has always been a strong supporter of the honors program. The award, a $500 check, will be given for the first time this year. Most of our honors graduates plan to continue their education in graduate schools. This is wonderful recognition for a young graduate who embarks on such a demanding professional journey."

College Welcomes Research Enthusiast

ridget Miller is Cazenovia College's new director for institutional research and assessment. Miller holds a master of public administration degree from the Maxwell School at Syracuse University. As an undergraduate, she majored in public policy and international relations.

Miller is responsible for coordination and completion of institutional surveys and Cazenovia College's participation in national data sharing and institutional research. She will provide data analysis and preparation of reports for both internal and external use and distribution. A key function of this position is the translation of data into usable information for all levels of assessment at the College.

"I am thrilled to have been given the opportunity to utilize my research and analysis skills here at Cazenovia College," she says. Miller is enthusiastic about future projects and notes that she was drawn to Cazenovia College because of its small-town atmosphere and opportunity to know individuals on a personal level.

Office of Student Life and Development Welcomes New Face, New Vision

↑ visionary with a zest for education has taken the Cazenovia College Acampus by storm. With a background rich in counseling, planning and programming, Idonas Hughes, associate dean for student development and coordinator of judicial affairs, descended upon the campus in June 2008 and has since been a guiding force for students.

Hughes foresees new Student Life activities on the horizon for Cazenovia College students. In addition to enhancing the existing variety of programs, he and his colleagues are collaborating to present special topic lectures, host divisional study groups and launch a programming survey. They will increase their focus on residence life by emphasizing the residential community concept, introducing new residence hall traditions, encouraging involvement in residential government and expanding living-learning environments. They will also seek to invigorate the first year experience, offer programs specific to each class year and serve the needs of graduating seniors.

A steady stream of new ideas, a mix of expertise, and a combination of staff skills surely presents the Office of Student Life and Development with a recipe for success.

Idonas Hughes, associate dean for student development and coordinator of judicial affairs, discusses an upcoming retreat with junior Desiree Zabriskie, interior design major from Branchville, N.J.

My Favorite Books to Teach

By Warren Olin-Ammentorp

Sometimes people ask if I have favorite books. I usually reply that if you asked me to choose ten or a hundred or even a thousand favorites, I could always come up with one or two or ten more. After all, I'm an English professor because I love books and reading.

"...being an English professor is more than just loving books and reading; it's equally a matter of teaching - sharing - my love of books and reading with students."

from them learn better ways of seeing themselves and their worlds.

These books demonstrate the importance of knowing a lot - that as humans we must all undertake journeys and make mistakes, partly because it's human nature to do so, but also because we must never be content with what we already know and think.

Thus, these books demonstrate that it's important to pay attention - that for the heroes, as for readers, there is nothing so small or insignificant that it does not play a part in the whole. And finally, they teach us to appreciate what we find in life. Whether fantasy or realism, whether old or new, these books show us that the more aware we are, the more worthwhile our lives become.

Reading makes us wiser by making us more attentive; attention makes us wiser by making us more appreciative. If we can learn to do this well with a book, at least every so often, perhaps we can do it in our lives as well.

Warren's favorites in no particular order:

n the other hand, being an English professor is more than just loving books and reading; it's equally a matter of teaching - sharing - my love of books and reading with students. As a teacher I have to make choices for others, not myself. Over the years I've chosen and assigned a lot of books. Most work out okay, a few don't. Some are great . . . and some . . . some are always great. So when it comes to teaching, I will admit to having favorites.

These favorite books are special because they have consistently brought out the best in students and in me. And although the list is varied, they have a lot of things in common.

They all have heroes who get lost or miss their way or wander far from home into adventures they're not prepared for. They all have heroes who make mistakes and yet maintain (or gain) the courage to acknowledge those mistakes and to learn

The Odyssey,

by Homer

This familiar story of a man battling monsters and getting home is always worth reading. It's a fun adventure, but also a deeply thought out portrait of what it means to be a human being. It is only by telling his own story to others that Odysseus overcomes his greatest obstacle and finds his path toward home. Homer shows us why we need stories in the first place - because life is varied and complex and confusing and we need a way to sort out all the bits so we can see the underlying truths of life.

Pride and Prejudice and/or Emma,

by Jane Austen

Lots of people like Jane Austen, but she's even more enjoyable when we recognize her true strengths. Good love stories with happy endings are nice, but Austen shows that love and happiness are not so simple. A powerful satirist, her characters portray all that is wrong with what we think is the best in ourselves - which makes true love even more difficult and even more important. Moreover, she writes perfect narrative plots and crafts immaculate prose. There is nothing in her greatest novels that does not teach us something useful about literature and life.

The Lord of the Rings,

by J. R. R. Tolkien

Famous as a writer of fantasy adventure. Tolkien teaches us that difference between entertainment and literature is not a matter of genre, but a matter of depth. Tolkien drew upon his deep knowledge of language and culture to create a dense and intricate imaginary world. In that world, knowledge of history and the world beyond the doorstep make all the difference. Without this knowledge we are apt to become selfish, reclusive, even evil; with them we can see the best in others, find friendship in the strangest places, and survive through our love for one another. Tolkien's magic is deep - and reading him slowly and carefully in the company of others is one of the greatest pleasures I know.

War and Peace,

by Leo Tolstoy

It may or may not be the greatest of all novels, but it is one of the greatest. It is rich with unforgettable characters, rich with action, rich with ideas and insights. Once, a special group of students wanted a chance to read it. They asked, it happened, and it was wonderful.

Maus,

by Art Spiegelman

First, this comic has helped many people see why it's wrong to call comics simple and juvenile. Second, this comic best represents what comics have to offer. Through the interaction of images and printed words arranged on pages, Spiegelman does more than tell a story of suffering and survival; he also shows us that understanding the impact of history on individual human lives is a complex and difficult task - because perspectives shift, words change meanings, languages differ, things are not always what they seem, and our efforts to grasp the truth are always influenced by personal circumstances.

Where the Wild Things Are,

by Maurice Sendak

Sendak's work is just a simple children's picture book - except that it isn't. Reading a book we think we understand, a book we think is simple to understand, is often difficult. We have to consider basic issues: Where are the words? What size are the pictures? Do the words and pictures all match in the ways we think they should? If we pay attention, really pay attention, to this book, we discover wonderful things. We discover that it's possible for a boy to be a wild thing... and not. We also discover that it's possible to run off to do wild things . . . and still find love and forgiveness waiting for us in the place we never left.

About the Author:

Professor of English Warren Olin-Ammentorp began teaching at Cazenovia College in 1990. Over the past two decades, he has focused his energies on teaching and service. His professional interests include the history of the novel, children's literature, and genre studies. His service projects have included work on college accreditation, strategic planning, and assessment. He has also directed the College's annual Faculty Library Lecture Series in cooperation with the Cazenovia Public Library and the Manlius Library.

Olin-Ammentorp earned a bachelor of arts degree from Carleton College, a master of arts degree from the University of Chicago, and his Ph.D., from the University of Michigan.

In addition to being named the honorary member of the sophomore class in 2001, Olin-Ammentorp received the Distinguished Faculty Achievement Award in 2008. A sampling of the courses he has taught over the years includes British, American and World Literatures; Literature and Culture (1600-1750 and 1750-1900); Children's Literature; Myth and the Modern Mind; Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings; and Introduction to Comics and Sequential Art.

In his spare time he enjoys drawing, music, learning, reading, and spending time with his wife, Julie Olin-Ammentorp - a professor of English at Le Moyne College - and their two children.

Interior design student completes executive conference room rendering for international company

nterior design instructor Susan Farrell feels strongly about provid-Ling student interns with real world working experience. In addition to her teaching role at Cazenovia College, Farrell is a professional designer at Corporate Interiors, a commercial interior design firm in Syracuse, N.Y. "We expose our interns to everything," says Farrell.

Working in the design field and teach ing at the College have allowed Farrell to collaborate with students in and out of the classroom, combining expert instruction with industry experience, as well as providing opportunities for aspiring interior designers to add to their professional portfolios. Such was the case with senior Jessica Hall. of Liverpool, N.Y., a transfer interior design student, who recently benefited from a unique opportunity.

resource," says Farrell. She invited students in her History of Architecture and Interiors class to take on the rendering project, which required a complete design, including floors, walls, ceiling, furniture, lighting and more.

"I was pleased that Jessica expressed her interest. She was the perfect choice," said Farrell, who was aware of Hall's work ethic and professional attitude after interacting with her the previous summer when Hall was an intern with Dobkin Tile in Syracuse.

After selecting Hall for the job, Farrell gave her the floor plan, some handdrawn sketches and samples of fabric, carpet, hard surfaces, and pictures of the selected furnishings, from which to work. Hall took the folder full of materials and finished the project in a weekend, well in advance of the client's deadline. "She did a wonderful job turning the materials into an executive conference room that the client could fully conceptualize."

Hall says, "This was an amazing chance for me to grow and gain tangible experience, add to my portfolio and design a board room for an international company. The project also had some sentimental value since my dad recently retired from Lockheed Martin. I designed a new conference room at a company and in a meeting room where my dad spent so much time."

Hall's work exceeded Farrell's expectations. "It is one of the best renderings

Honors Students Study the Holocaust

"Meditate that this came about"

In his poem, "Survival in Auschwitz," Primo Levi wrote,

You who live safe in your warm houses, You who find, returning in the evening, Hot food and friendly faces ... Meditate that this came about."

Cazenovia College's All College Honors Holocaust Seminar follows Levi's dictate: to wonder that genocide can happen. Eight seminar students recently toured the Museum of Jewish Heritage in New York City and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. The trip was underwritten by Trustee Richard Alberding and his wife, Marilyn.

The seminar follows a fall semester lecture by Diane Ackerman, author of "The Zookeeper's Wife," a chronicle of heroism during the Holocaust.

Dr. Grazyna Kozaczka, professor of English and director of the All College Honors Program, and Dr. Sharon Dettmer, associate professor of social science and chair of the Division of Social and Behavioral Sciences, are team-teaching the seminar, each in areas related to her own academic field

After the tour, students shared their experiences. Samantha Brooks began, "As we walked to the hotel in New York City, I felt like a stranger in a place where the natives know who is a tourist. I thought about how those who were persecuted must have felt about wearing the Star of David."

"One of the best things for me," said Laura Duchette, "was that the heritage museum showed people individually." Alexis MacDonald explained that the memorial museum showed what "the people went through - the hardships they endured."

Heather Kicsak added, "At the heritage museum we followed a survivor from his childhood home to the ghetto, and then to a concentration camp, where he saw his mother and sister for the last time."

"I knew only a little about Jewish history and culture," Marisa Shea said. "I was surprised to learn about pogroms, and to discover how targeted Jews were before Hitler ever came to power."

"I saw what each person suffered," Olivia Bosies said, "and realized they were not just Jews, or Poles or Gypsies, but individuals who had families, jobs, and lives."

Caralyn Zaleski wondered "how the Nazis justified to themselves the things they were doing, and why people didn't object more strongly."

After attending the play "Wicked," Megan Relyea said "we realized the Wizard's giving the Munchkins a common enemy was similar to the persecution of the Jews or other races throughout history, and related the play to genocide and the consequences of racism."

Kozaczka recognizes how discomfiting it can be to confront events such as the Holocaust. She said, "Even though visits to Holocaust museums cause emotional distress, we have a responsibility to know and to remember what happened to millions of victims."

Racism and genocide are still in the world; governments still turn away. The 14 honors students in the seminar are learning, sometimes painfully, how it can happen.

60th Honored Year

Sally Rollins Meinweiser '49 writes, "Our 60th reunion is creeping up on us. It would be terrific to get us all back to Caz. The changes on campus in 60 years are extraordinary. If you haven't been back you'll be in awe. Let's make 2009 a '49 year to remember. I look forward to seeing you at Reunion, June 12-14."

"Enjoying life of tennis, exercising and traveling while my husband works in New York and commutes to Hilton Head, S.C., on weekends. Seven grandchildren are great. The youngest are 13-year-old twins; the oldest is 25.1 hear from Mary Lee 'Brownie' McCabe '51."

Rush University in Chicago. She is still doing therapy work but closer to Joliet. Susan hopes to hear from her classmates!

50th Honored Year

Judith Bond Clarke '59 and Mary Burton Thompson '59 encourage classmates to start making plans to return to Cazenovia for Reunion, June 12-14. There will be lodging available in the new Shove Suites and a special 50th honored year reception Elizabeth Leighton Kent '51 writes, at the President's House. They hope to see everyone there!

> Patricia Gould Reske '59 writes, "Hello 1959 classmates. It is with much regret that I will be unable to attend our 50th reunion. All is fine and I send my love and best wishes to all of you. Have a great time!"

Sheila Haber Friedman '60 writes, "My husband, Harvey, and I celebrated our 49th

We were so enthusiastic about his candidacy that for the first time in our lives, we volunteered at a local campaign office. We have lived in Florida since 1987."

Barbara Stec McClain '60 writes, "Now retired, I'm busier than ever. For the past two years and for the next two, I have been president of the San Bernardino Federated Republican Women's Club. Also a member of Epsilon Sigma Alpha (a philanthropic and educational society) I received the honor of for the State of New Mexico. It was a real

Virginia Owen Philippy '61 writes, "After retiring from 25 years of teaching art and enjoying a year of freedom, I have returned to a two-day-a-week position at a local private school and LOVING every minute of getting covered in paint again!"

Martha Millard Sprague '61 writes, "Don and I are enjoying our home in Colorado. After years of moving due to military service, and management and ownership in a real estate company, it's nice to be home. We have four children and soon-to-be seven grandchildren."

Norma Amorosi Fanzo '61 wants to contact classmates from 1959-60. Please e-mail her at nfanzo520@aol.com or call 410.903.0284. Norma is currently living in St. Petersburg, Fla. She is most interested in contacting roommate Colleen O'Shea '61 from Cortland, N.Y.

Teaching in Two Worlds

Critz Farms business complements classroom career

Juanita Ares Critz '78 has spent most of her working life with three jobs: motherhood, teaching, and helping her husband, Matthew, build their Cazenovia farm into a successful agri-tourism attraction, centered on diversified agriculture and focused on family entertainment.

"I wanted to teach nursery school," she says, "and I wanted a college near home (Manlius, N.Y.). I visited Cazenovia College and knew right away I wanted to go there. It was a great fit."

Critz teaches elementary special education, but early childhood was her first passion. "Working at the college nursery school really helped me find my niche. I began niche. I began working with kids with disabilities at Caz too," she says. "I interned at Syracuse University's day care center; then was hired full-time. One of the perks was free tuition," she continues. "I earned my bachelor's degree in elementary education, and my master's in special education." She worked for Easter Seals in Florida and ran her own preschool program in Connecticut, before returning to Cazenovia to settle down.

away I wanted

- Juanita Ares Critz

Critz says, "Matthew and I both have the entrepreneurial spirit, and our skills really complement each others'. He does all the farming and we work together on the rest. Balancing the farm, teaching and parenting was a challenge, but I was lucky enough to negotiate a job share at my school. That gave me more time for the children and Critz Farms."

Critz serves on the board of the Cazenovia Area Community Development

Association (CACDA), a group dedicated to enhancing the area's economy while preserving its rural and historic characteristics, and is a member of Madison County Tourism, and the Greater Cazenovia Area Chamber of Commerce.

Critz and her husband share the philosophy 'work hardplay hard.' "We love to travel, and now that we're emptynesters it's a little easier. I look forward to stepping back from the farm work and retiring from teaching, but I'm not ready to give any of it up just yet."

CLASS NOTES

Donna Norcross Schardt '61 lives in Richmond, Va., and Moneta, Va., in the summer. She has been married to James Schardt for 40-plus years and has three children and six grandchildren. Donna would love to hear from classmates. Her e-mail address is: DNSchardt@aol.com.

1962

Martha Dyer Hooper '62 writes, "Attended Cazenovia alumni gathering in November 2008 at The Harvard Club in Boston. Fun to connect with other alums and meet some of the staff! Enjoying retirement and our grandchildren: 18, 13, 11 and 2."

Mary Sassman Comer '62 is married to husband, Roger. She retired from a 21-year flight attendant career with Piedmont/USAirways in 2004. Mary is living on

Mary has three children and four grandchildren. She is looking for Jane Lee '62. Find her at TEAMWORK@atmc.net.

Bonnie Rose George '63 writes, "2008 was a wonderful year...and 2009 is even better! I was married the day after Thanksgiving to Peter Schied, an exceptional man. Thanks to my incredible Cazenovia classmates, Jane Spivey Dashine '63, Susie Weston Violi '63 and Rebecca Corning Chapman '63 for leading me in the right direction in the romance department!! Now here is the very best news...my daughter gave me my first grandchild...a bouncing baby boy! What a joy. Henry Leo Schulz...I'm thinking movie mogul! Hello to all my Caz classmates....what times we had!"

1964 45th Honored Year

Marcia Hoffman Machemer '64 and Carolyn Loeffler Sterner '64, class agents for the Class of 1964, are looking forward to seeing everyone at their 45th honored year Reunion, June 12-14. Marcia and Carolyn write, "It's hard to believe it has been that long since we were all together at graduation. It seems like almost yesterday that we were wearing our Caz beanies as freshmen. We hope you have marked your calendar for June so we can renew old friendships and reminisce about those great years at Cazenovia."

Tekla Dennison Miller '64 announces the release of her new novel, Inevitable Sentences, Medallion Press. Tekla writes, "But more important, I hope to see my classmates at our 45th reunion in June. I will be attending with my husband, Chet."

Stephanie Kravec '64 writes, "Hello everyone from 1964. I can't believe it's almost 45 years. I currently live in Westchester County. I completed my master's degree in social work and have been in private practice in NYC and Westchester since 1980. I serve on the board of Eastern Group Therapy Society and do some part-time teaching. I love returning to Cazenovia and recently bought a small house on DeRuyter Lake (8 miles from Caz). Let's try to come together at this year's reunion, June 12-14. My e-mail is Skravec@aol.com."

Marra Casserino Giuliano '64 writes, "At Christmas I hear from Beth Lake Goldin '64 and Paula Carriera Andrewson '64. This year I got a special treat, hearing from my 'roomie,' Mary Callen Panlener '64 by phone. All are well. We wonder where are Patsy Jarvis '64, Nancy Bobrick Michaud '64 and Sue Massey '64. For me, the holiday season always brings to mind Helen "Pindy" Mastin Brister '64, who died and whose Christmas call I'll always miss. Several summers ago while on vacation on the Cape, we met one of her sons and her grandchild. It was bittersweet. Husband Michael and I retired from the family business four years ago. He has become a wonderful woodworker, and I have returned to my painting and have taken up writing. I suggest you read our class president, Tekla Dennison Miller's '64 first book 'A Bowl of Cherries.' It's absolutely wonderful and so well written. Hard to believe 45 years have passed since we graduated Cazenovia. We had no idea those were some of the best years of our lives. Regards and good health to all."

Joan Goldman Zoslow '64 had lunch in March with development director Joan Brooks in Washington, D.C. They looked through the class yearbook and alumni directory and talked about nicknames, dorms and Albert's. "I hope all is well with everyone from Centennial and Hubbard. A special hello to Sue Massey and Marra Casserino."

Ann Hustleby Hohman '65 writes, "Has anyone seen Stephanie Ingham? I am looking for her. I live half the year in Port St. Lucie, Fla., and half the year in Narragansett, R.I. Daughter, Kate, got married in September 2008. I would love to hear from old friends."

1966

Sandy Botti Bethlenfalvy '66 writes, "I graduated in 1966 and can honestly say my two years at Cazenovia were among the best of my life. I went on to get my bachelor's degree at Kent State University. I will celebrate 40 years of marriage on August 3. I have two children and a 6-month-old grandson. I am currently employed by a local home builder as a consulting sales assistant and love it. I would love to hear from Barbara Miller '66 and Cathy Garnet '66.

40th Honored Year

Nancy LeValley Farley '69 writes, "I am looking forward to seeing everyone at our 40th reunion in June. Would love to see a big turnout for the Class of '69! Check out our page on Facebook; Caz College Class of 1969. Make sure to leave a message on the wall and comment on the posted topics; or add a new topic yourself. Who knows?! You might find a long-lost classmate!"

Janice Wegener Grieshaber '69 was recently engaged. The organization Janice heads, The Jenna Foundation for Nonviolence, was recently recognized for service to the community by the Jewish Community Center.

Holly Taylor Young '69 writes, "After forty years away, I would be interested in coming back but only with a little help from my friends. Where are you Colleen, Debbie, Marsha, Molly, Sally and Grace?"

Patti Haskell '69 was ordained from the Reconstructionist Rabbinical College in 2006 and then spent a year in Albuquerque doing a one-year chaplaincy internship. In August 2007, she moved to Encinitas, Calif., to work at Seacrest Village Community as their rabbi. Patti writes, "I am really thrilled with the work, which is quite varied (leading services for Sabbath and holidays, teaching, doing chaplaincy, etc.) and incredibly nourishing. Living near the beach and not far from the desert is heavenly. My son and mother are still on the east coast, so I do miss them. My sister is out here with me for a while. I would love to reconnect with my Caz friends (and you can find me on Facebook!)"

Karen Lekander Pieper '69 writes, "My husband, Gary, and I have lived in Sweetwater, N.J., for 26 years. We are both retired and enjoying it! We have one son, Matt, who lives in New York City and works as a reporter/anchor. Gary's two older sons and their wives both live in N.J., and between them we have four wonderful grandchildren. We spend our time between homes in Sweetwater and North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 'Life is Good'!"

Katherine Anderson Sillari '70 lives in Topsfield, Mass., with her husband. She has two children; Caroline, 23, and Andrew, 21. Katherine has spoken to Mary Kesel '70 and Kay MacCormack '70.

Linda Lee Potter '70 and husband, Bill, have been married 36 years and have lived in Glen Ridge, N.I., for 26 years. The couple have three children; Lisa, Meredith and Andrew. Linda writes, "Lisa and husband, Andy, recently made us grandparents when Nathaniel 'the cutest baby that ever was' was born in October 2008. Hi to everyone from the Class of 1970."

Janice Williams '70 writes, "Two granddaughters Delaney O'Dea Malone (5) and McKenna Finney Malone (3). Still living in Elmira, N.Y. Recently had a reunion with Marilyn Turner '70 who lives in Abington, Mass. We are planning on coming to our 40th next year along with Nancy Stolp O'Brien '70 and Trish VonWellsheim Rhodes '70!! Where are you Gail Weiss?!!'

Scottie O'Toole '71 writes." | visited Cazenovia over Labor Day weekend this past year and was very favorably impressed with all new and refurbished facilities on campus. The place looked beautiful with lovely landscaping and wonderful use of old space. The new art building is most impressive, as is the bookstore. Also had a chance to visit with several Caz alums...Judith Bond Clarke '59, Carmela Peters '73, Darlene Price Pulkinen '75, Patti Rickett Christakos '77, Janet Willingham Enders '71 and Carolyn Cooney '73, former dean of students. It was a wonderful mini-reunion!"

Pamela Vogtli Compson '71 writes, "My husband and I recently moved from Rochester, N.Y., to a Sun City community just south of Charlotte, N.C.We are enjoying retirement in an active adult community. So many clubs and things to do, so little time to do them all."

Margaret Winslow Montgomery '71 writes, "Thank you for the excellent calendar. It was beautiful and brought back lots of memories. I am trying to get in touch with my classmates and lost addresses when my computer crashed. You can reach me at 146 Lawrence Point, Fourth Lake, Old Forge, N.Y. 13420 or mmont@telenet.net."

Roxanne Roth Blake '72 writes. Spent 28 years in Gourmet Food, Wine and Cheese. Retired and now devoting 100% of my time and activities to Animal Rescue and Shelters! I am happily married with two children and three step-children."

Joan Halperin Rabin '72 lives in Atlanta and retired in 2004 from teaching special education. Her husband, Dan, is a manager at Citigroup. The couple has three daughters. Sarah, 24, lives in New York City, and is an NBC Page currently working at the TODAY Show. Michelle, 21, is a senior at the University of Georgia majoring in social work. Stephanie, 21, is a senior at the University of Florida, majoring in counseling. Joan would love to hear from Tina and Barb. E-mail me at dray461208@aol.com.

Mary "MJ" Kilian Walker '72 writes, "Hello Classmates from 1972! The years have really flown by. We're moving towards our 40th year reunion in 2012. Mark your calendars NOW to join us at this year's Reunion, June 12-14, so we can start making plans!! I realize the problem with the economy has hit us all, but I'm asking each member of our class to please give at least $5 as a donation this year. If we each give $5, our scholarship fund would be growing and we would show our College that we really care in helping a student have the great opportunity we had. Also, we would like to get a Cazenovia College Rochester Alumni Chapter going, so if you live in the Rochester area and would like to participate please contact me via e-mail at mwalke3@rochester.rr.com or contact the Alumni Office."

Faye Jordan Titus '72 writes, "Our family has been busy and growing. Our youngest is a freshman at Hofstra University and his love of acting continues. Our daughter is designing upscale clothing stores for a firm in New York City. Our oldest son, David, and wife Phoebe, are starting a video/theater business in Pennsylvania. Dave and Phoebe added a baby sister, Natailia, to our first granddaughter, Cordelia (4). Peter is with MIT Fusion and General Atomics. I am with them all as often as possible and volunteer when possible. We do a fair bit of travel. Hello to all from Shove

Alumna to Address the Graduates

Melissa Klish Dino '89 will return to the campus of her alma mater to address the graduates at Cazenovia College's 184th Commencement Ceremony on Saturday, May 16, 2009.

A producer for Sesame Street for more than 16 years, Dino has created educational programming that is viewed across the globe. Dino has won nine Emmy awards.

A Cazenovia Graduate's Canterbury Tale

Renee Carman '07 finds success abroad

s Renee Carman '07 was growing up in Cortland County, N.Y., she never knew she would someday tell her own Canterbury tale.

Intrigued by Cazenovia College's fashion program, she attended a portfolio interview with Professor Corky Goss. After this meeting, Carman was inspired to major in visual communications, a field that combined all her creative talents. As seasons passed, Carman strengthened her portfolio, joined extracurricular activities and perfected her design skills.

In the spring of her sophomore year, she heard about the Canterbury study abroad program. Drawn to a new challenge, she became a member of the inaugural class of the College's study abroad program at Canterbury Christ Church University. Carman credits President Mark Tierno with being a guiding force in her ultimate choice.

In fall 2005, Carman journeyed to Canterbury, England, for a specialized one-semester program. "I loved living in Canterbury," added Carman. "I learned what it was to be an American." She notes that her short time in England allowed her to learn and experience British culture.

After she graduated from Cazenovia College, Carman moved to Epsom, England, to obtain her master's degree in graphic design and communication (professional) from the University for the Creative Arts at Epsom. Her design credentials opened the way to her current position as a programs and pricing assistant in the Branding and Marketing Department for Western Digital, a global leader in digital storage. Her future goals include working as an account manager for a design consultancy.

"There is no substitute for international learning experiences," says Tierno. "Renee represents an example of someone who would never have dreamed to earn a master's degree in another country, and yet, that's exactly what she's done."

the best."

Amy Serling Hagan '73 is a third grade teacher at Burton Street Elementary in Cazenovia. Amy has three children: Peter, 27, of Geneva, N.Y.: Tim. 24, of Boston, Mass.; and Carrie, a senior at Cazenovia High School. Amy has been married to Barney Hagen for 28 years. She writes, "Would love to reunite with my Cazenovia College friends. Curtiss (where are you?), Gail, Carol, Alison, Betsy, Pricilla and Debbie (Blobs!). Let's get together!"

Maria Hutsick '73 writes," I recently came back to Caz after many years to speak at the Hall of Fame Banquet. I also was able to honor Mrs. Mary Klysa Hammond, who taught business at the College for years. She helped me with financial aid and was the reason I could stay in school. Sadly, she passed away in January 2009. Caz was great and has grown tremendously. I resigned my position as director of sports medicine at Boston University after 27 years. I am now teaching and working as an athletic trainer at Medfield High School in Medfield. Mass."

Marian Birge '73 recently changed her business partnership to Garcia and Birge: A Professional Law Corporation. The firm practices in the areas of employment law and civil litigation, and is located in North San Diego County, Calif. Marian, with partner Silvia Garcia, recently contributed a chapter titled "Voir Dire and Plaintiff's Opening Statement" to a publication scheduled for release later this year, the American Bar Association Torts and Trial Practice Section's Litigating the Harassment Case.

Marina Guidetti '73 writes, "Still single. Have been working for Continental Airlines for the past 27 years, presently as an International Flight Attendant. I still travel all over the world, everywhere in Europe and as far as India and China. My son, Andrew, is a sophomore at UMass Dartmouth majoring in computer science engineering. On the side, I own and rent two doll house cottages in Cape Cod (summer and winter). If anyone is interested, please contact me at mtgsky@ earthlink.net."

Melanie Schwarz Seamans '75

writes, "I have lived in Tempe, Ariz., for the past 30 years with my husband of 30 years, Nick. We have a daughter, Breanne, 23, who will graduate summa cum laude in May from Arizona State University. Our son, Brett, 20, is graduating from the Conservatory of Recording Arts and Sciences. I have been working for the same company for 13 plus years as division

Jill Hebl St. Clair Endowed Scholarship Announced

Fund in memory of St. Clair will benefit Cazenovia College students he late Jill Hebl St. Clair '62 was the inspiration for a scholarship at her alma mater, given by her husband, James H. "Jimmy" St. Clair of Houston, Texas. Hebl St. Clair, who graduated from Cazenovia in 1962, died in 2006 after a brief battle with cancer.

A native of Freeport, Long Island, N.Y., Jill Hebl went to work for Shell Oil after her graduation. In 1970, Shell transferred her to Houston, Texas, where she met Jimmy St. Clair at a Houston ski club. They married in 1994.

Hebl St. Clair, who retired from Shell after 39 years of service, also served as president of the West Houston Shell Alumni Club, treasurer of Space City Ski Club and secretary of Houston Underwater Club. She was active with her church and a loyal Red Cross blood donor.

Jimmy St. Clair has given $110,000 to fund the scholarship, specifying that funds will be awarded to a female Cazenovia College student with financial need who excels academically, and is entering her freshman or sophomore year at the College. The first scholarship will be awarded in 2010.

Dr. Mark J. Tierno, president of Cazenovia College, said, "Gifts like this allow our students to learn and advance in our small community environment, just as Jill Hebl St. Clair did when she was a student here. Mr. St. Clair has made a commitment to honor her memory by assisting, in perpetuity, other young women at Cazenovia College. Gifts like this are what make it possible for us to succeed in our mission of building futures for America's young people."

vice president of Life Care Centers of America, overseeing 34 skilled nursing centers in Arizona, Nevada, California and Utah. I would love to hear from any of my classmates!"

Iennifer Holmes '75 writes." I have great kids and am happy to say that they are healthy, bright, well-traveled, and have a great love and ear for languages. Dylan, 23, is working as a junior talent agent in L.A.; Hunter, 21, is a sophomore at the University of the Pacific, preparing to spend next year studying at the University of Jordan on an ambassadorial scholarship. Scarlett, 15, will be living with a family in Paris next year. Yikes! I have been married for 30 years and live in Carmel, Calif. I think of Carol, Gretchen, Barb and Anne often. I hope you all are well! I still keep in touch with the handsome Professor Hopkins! Best wishes to all."

nthusiastic Cazenovia College students call alumni every semester from our Phonathon call center to share the latest campus news and update alumni contact information. Phonathon callers also share how alumni gifts to the Annual Fund directly benefit students by supporting scholarships and financial aid; student clubs, teams, and leadership activities; academic programs; and technology and facility improvements.

Every Phonathon gift increases Cazenovia College's alumni participation rate, which shows today's students that Cazenovia graduates believe in their alma mater. Alumni participation also shows businesses and foundations that Cazenovia College has strong support and is worth their investment. If a Phonathon caller contacts you, please share your Cazenovia College story with a future graduate and make a gift. Regardless of the amount, annual alumni participation really matters.

Contact Jessica Moquin, assistant director of the annual fund, at 315.655.7317 or e-mail jamoquin@cazenovia.edu for details. Thank you!

TRUSTEE HIGHLIGHTS

"It's My Turn to Give Back"

Richard L. Smith looks forward to new role as chair of the College Board of Trustees

Since Richard Smith joined the Cazenovia College Board of Trustees in 2001, he has enjoyed playing a role in helping students prepare for life by ensuring they get a quality education. "Building Futures Since 1824 is what we do at Cazenovia College," says Smith. "This core message drives our work as trustees."

Smith earned a bachelor of arts degree from Colgate University in 1968, and graduated from Cornell Law School in 1971. A native of Canastota, N.Y., in Madison County, he points out that his grandmother, Carrie Higgins Smith, and great grandfather, John Higgins, were natives of Cazenovia. "I have always felt close to Cazenovia and had great respect for the College."

"I believe that people have a duty to give back," Smith says. "Education has made all the difference in my life and I have an obligation to support causes that have contributed to the person I am today. Some served on boards, others were philanthropic in helping to lay the foundation for my education and career ascent; it's now my turn to do the same."

A practicing lawyer for 38 years, Smith is a senior member of the firm Bond, Schoeneck & King, PLLC, and has been active in numerous New York State Bar Association activities. He provides clients with administrative, legislative and regulatory representation, including counsel in corporate and tax matters. He has been a registered lobbyist for 35 years, was a part-time instructor at Cornell University Law School for three years, and served as a member of Le Moyne College's Board of Regents for six years.

drives our work

1824 is what

Smith was elected to the *New York*Super Lawyers 2008 - Upstate Edition.

He points out that through broad legal practice experience, "I have gained a thorough understanding of government, business and higher education, which helps me see the big picture."

Smith is proud of the progress the College has made over the past decade. "On campus one can see the tremendous strides we have made: construction of the Art & Design building, the addition of Shove Suites, the transformation of an art gallery into a Student Center, and a new admissions house that welcomes prospective students and their families to campus." Smith emphasized how rewarding it is that these projects were achieved with the involvement of the trustees, President Tierno and his leadership team, faculty, staff and students.

His election as chair of the Board in May 2008 was personally satisfying yet humbling, Smith says. "I am thankful to my colleagues on the Board and appreciate their confidence in me."

Smith also realizes that the current state of the economy will drive the leadership of the College to work even harder. He stresses, "The stewardship of Cazenovia College deserves more attention now than ever, to ensure that the College continues to be financially strong and an educational destination of ever increasing quality."

The 1824 Society

he 1824 Society was created by the Cazenovia College Board of Trustees to encourage leadership giving that helps to advance curriculum offerings, diversify campus life and create partnerships between the College and the community. Cazenovia College is proud to acknowledge the support and commitment of caring alumni and friends whose generosity enhances our students' educational experience.

Thank you to the current members of The 1824 Society for their leadership commitment to Cazenovia College. Gifts and pledges received since the fiscal year began July 1, 2008, are indicated with an asterisk.*

Making History on the Court

The men's basketball program has a new career scoring leader, while two student-athletes joined the College's 1,000-point club.

senior Stephen Harris (Waterv-liet, N.Y./Watervliet) became the career scoring leader for the men's program on February 22 in a loss to Wells College. The 5'11" guard needed just seven points entering the contest to surpass Chuck Cassidy's career mark of 1,545 points, and did so with a 13-point effort. Harris, who finished his Cazenovia career with a total of 1,597 points, holds numerous College records, including most three-pointers made, games played and games started.

Joining Harris this year as players who have scored 1,000 points in their

Cazenovia careers were senior teammate Erik Sauer (Pennellville, N.Y./Phoenix) and junior Colleen Clarke (Johnson City, N.Y./Johnson City) of the women's team. Clarke hit the 1,000-point mark just eight games into her junior campaign with a 17-point outing in a loss at St. John Fisher College on December 6. At the conclusion of the season, Clarke had 1,344 career points, putting her just 529 points away from becoming the program's scoring leader. Also in reach for Clarke are Cazenovia career records for three-pointers made and steals. Sauer scored his 1,000th career point in a win over Baptist Bible College at home on January 6. The milestone bucket came on one of Sauer's patented drives to the basket. He finished his career with 1,267 points, which is fourth-most in program history. Sauer's aggressive style of play has also earned him the second-most career free throws made.

In recognizing the achievements of these three players and those who came before them, a new banner honoring the 1,000-point scorers from both the men's and women's programs at Cazenovia College now hangs in the rafters of the upper gymnasium at the Stephen M. Schneeweiss Athletic Complex. Athletics Director Rob Kenna and men's basketball Head Coach Michael "Doc" Bowser unveiled the blue and gold banner at halftime of the men's basketball game against Penn State Harrisburg on Jan. 31.

Fifteen Student-Athletes Named All-NEAC

Fifteen Cazenovia College student-athletes were named All-Conference by the North Eastern Athletic Conference (NEAC) this past fall, representing the sports of volleyball, men's and women's soccer, and men's and women's cross country.

The men's and women's cross country squads placed five runners on All-Conference teams, with senior Tim Doyon (Bennington, Vt. /Mt. Anthony Union) as the lone first team selection. Men's runners Gary Reisman (Baldwinsville, N.Y./C.W. Baker) and Hank Church (Marcellus, N.Y./Marcellus), both juniors, each made the second team. On the women's side, junior Ashley Todd (Oneida, N.Y./Oneida) was a second team All-Conference selection, while freshman Valerie Dunn (Schenectady, N.Y./Mohonasen) was named to the third team.

Matthew Judge (Westmoreland, N.Y./ Medaille) was one of four seniors on the men's soccer team named All-Conference. Judge was voted to the first team, while Jeff Barton (Endwell, N.Y./Greene) made second team. Zachary Hooker (Glens Falls, N.Y./Glens Falls) and Mouhamadou Diaman (New York, N.Y./Manhattan International) were voted to the third team.

MILDCATS

The women's soccer team also landed four players on All-Conference teams. Junior Michelle Duffy (Troy, Pa./ Troy) made the second team and seniors Noelle Shapiro (Glenwood, N.J./Vernon Township), Courtney Stewart (DeWitt, N.Y./Manlius Pebble Hill), and freshman Leah Bates (Bath, N.Y./Haverling) were all named to the third team.

Rounding out the All-Conference selections were two members of the volleyball team. Freshman Lauren Harder (Oneonta, N.Y./Oneonta) was voted to the second team and senior Heather Morgan (Guilford, N.Y./Bainbridge-Guilford) appeared on the third team.

Second-Year Program Makes Strides

The women's swimming and diving team made a splash in 2008-09.

The Cazenovia College women's swimming and diving team is in just its second year as a varsity program, but the Wildcats have made great progress since the team's inception.

This year's squad compiled a 5-4 record in dual meets, compared to a 2-6 mark in their 2007-08 inaugural season. In addition, the Wildcats turned in one of the best performances in the short history of the program on January 24, at the SUNY Delhi Spring Sprint Invitational. The team amassed 322 points en route to a first-place finish, winning the College's first ever invitational. The team also won a total of eight events and two members of the squad broke SUNY Delhi pool records. The Wildcats established eight Cazenovia College records in both swimming and diving events.

The Wildcats' season ended at the women's Upper New York State Collegiate Swimming Association (UNYSCSA) Championships at Nottingham High School February 18-21, where the team scored more than double the points they did at last season's event. They also advanced to the finals in all five relays, compared to only two last year.

Two-time team captain and MVP Anna Layton (Burlington Flats, N.Y./Perkiom Valley) will be sorely missed next season as she graduates from Cazenovia. Layton started swimming and diving with Head Coach Bill Houser four years ago, two years before the College team was even established, and has been an integral part of the development of the program. She is the only Wildcat to score individual points at the UNYSCSA Championships in both the one and three-meter diving events. Layton currently holds five individual Cazenovia records and is part of all five College relay records.

Cazenovia College Athletics Goes Pink

Written by Allison Bradshaw

The Cazenovia College Athletics Department, along with the campus community, recently took part in the Women's Basketball Coaches Association's (WBCA) Pink ZoneTM initiative in an effort to raise money and awareness for breast cancer.

The week-long event - February 9-14 featured a variety of fundraising events and culminated with men's and women's basketball games against local rival Morrisville State on Valentine's Day. Several departments on campus staged a "Jar War" for the week, where students and employees competed against each other to see who could raise the most money in loose change. Pink ribbons were also sold throughout the week outside of the Dining Hall. Purchased ribbons were then displayed outside the entrance to the upper gymnasium at the Schneeweiss Athletic Complex. During the games, a 50/50 raffle was conducted, as well as a pink paper airplane throwing contest. Both were used to generate money for breast cancer awareness. The combined efforts raised more than $600 for the Kay Yow/WBCA Cancer Fund™.

The Pink Zone™ initiative is a global, unified effort for the WBCA nation of coaches to assist in raising breast cancer awareness on the court, across campuses, in communities and beyond. In 2008, over 1,200 teams and organizations participated, reaching over 830,000 fans and raising over $930,000 for breast cancer awareness and research.

Reaching Out to Parents

There has been a lot of activity in the Parent Relations Office over the past several months.

(L-R): Laura Benoit, director of Parent Relations; Kathryn Sepka, new Alpha Chi National Honor Society member; her father William Sepka; and her grandmother Ruth Schultze at a recent Parent Relations hosted reception, held in honor of the newest class of Alpha Chi inductees and their families

The office was very busy with the "Surprise Your Student" program during the week preceding Valentine's Day. "It was fun seeing our students' faces as they opened their special surprise packages," said Director of Parent Relations Laura Benoit.

The College's Web site now has a special parents section. If you have not visited the site in a while, please take a moment to view this new addition at www.cazenovia.edu/parents. Important links have been added for user-friendly parent access. We have also added a monthly news section, so please check back frequently for current news and updates.

Save the date for Homecoming/Family Weekend: October 2-4, 2009. As always, the Office of Parent Relations welcomes your suggestions and comments. Please call 315.655.7378 or e-mail parents@cazenovia.edu. We look forward to hearing from you.

Without the continued support of alumni and friends, some students may not be able to return to Cazenovia College to complete their education.

his is a challenging economic time in our country's history and colleges and universities such as Cazenovia College are not immune. Now more than ever, tuition assistance is vitally important.

Scholarships assist in our efforts to attract students with academic promise and provide aid to those with the greatest financial need. By supporting our scholarship program, you enable students to experience the value of a Cazenovia College education.

It is critical that we work together to continue to meet the current financial challenges. I encourage you to consider making a gift to support student scholarships. Your gift today will allow our Financial Aid Office to make planned scholarship and grant awards to students who are counting on them."

- Mark J.Tierno
- This year 817 students received need-based aid through scholarships or grants.
- More than 90% of our students receive some form of financial aid.
